Hollywood Warts nâ™ AllBy: Alan RoyleThis is a collection of tell-all stories about Hollywood and its most famous stars, scandals, fights, love affairs and sexy (not so secret) secrets.I am a HUGE fan of Hollywood. The intrigue, the mystery, the scandalsâ |especially those that occurred in the first 100 years or so. Charlie Chaplin, Joan Crawford, Errol Flynn, these people fascinate me! I knew lâ™d enjoy this book and I did!However, as much as I did enjoy the informationâ |I did not enjoy the formatting, the errors and the (honestly) sloppy writing.Just for examples: 1. Actor Richard Long is famous for playing Jarrod Barkley in the TV series Big Valley. The author called him, âœâ |Richard Long of Bonanza fame.â • 2. In the following two paragraphs, the author assumes that I, the reader, already know all the same things he does. This is a common theme throughout the whole book.â œErnie Kovacs was hilarious as the cigar-chomping conman in this western comedy. Two years after its completion he was killed in a car accident. Police attending the scene surmised he had been reaching for a lighter to ignite his cigar, and took his eyes off the road momentarily. ^Capucine^™ is the French word for nasturtium, her favorite flower. Rumors have abounded for decades that the French beauty was a transsexual, but they have never been confirmed. I know that Capucine was a French actress who made 36 films between 1948 and 1990. I did not know it before reading these paragraphs. As far as I could tell, the author was giving a lesson in French, right in the middle of the story about Kovacs. I was left thinking, who's favorite flower was the nasturtium.
