These short training tips and games are wonderful! My dog has a short attention span and is very active. I needed something to help me teach him, help me lengthen his attention span, and help him to learn. The games in this book stimulate your dog's brain and build confidence. Your dog needs mental stimulation and variety to truly enjoy playtime, and this book provides some great examples for how to do just that.

This book brought up an idea which I have never heard of before, brain training for dogs. I know that brain training and brain games are useful ways to become sharper and smarter but I never thought that the same tips could be adapted for my dog! This book has probably 30 different games you can play with your dogs which will make them understand that they are loved and challenge their mental faculties to make sure that they stay sharp as they age. Good book, highly recommended

This book is for the time challenged dog owner. Teach your best friend a cute trick so you continue a great relationship and exercise your dog's brain. Exercising the brain is as exhausting as a run around the neighborhood! Try it! This book gives you all the tools you'll need even if you've never trained a trick or trained your dog to do anything! FUN! I was able to do a few of the tricks with just the stuff around my house but generally speaking most of the tricks done i am with my dog.

I have several of Carrie Nichole's puppy & dog training books - she is a fantastic trainer. The books are already very easy to understand and use. Some of the games in this book do require materials that you will need to find/improvise. But there's plenty of games you can do immediately.

I have long been wondering how there are smart dogs and there are lazy dogs. My dog Mc Steamy falls for the latter category. Knowing that dogs need brain stimulation just as humans do, that's when this book comes in! There's several good ideas for games that I can apply to my lovely lazy cutie dog. The part where it made me like the book is the notion that applies to all kinds of dogs. As the book points out, "No dog is left behind." While, the author guarantees that these tips and tricks make dogs smarter, I have doubts with my Mc Steamy's capabilities. LOL! I realized that these games are effective in enhancing brain function of dogs. They are also rewarding for both your dog and the owner. It is full of fun. I am taking them down now. I will surely apply them as soon as I have the play time with my Mc Steamy again.

You can have a disciplined and well trained dog you ever had with the right direction and devoting some time to your dog at right time and in right way. This is very fun thing to do. We can teach our dogs by playing games. This brain game has many advantages. They are great way to bond with our pets. Research shows that these game are very helpful to enhance learning skills and memory power. Word games were very helpful for reminding things to my dog. I enjoyed hide and seek games. Playing game in water will make your dog not to be afraid of bathing. There are both indoor and outdoor games so you can choose which ever you want. Pets are family so it's better to have well trained.

Mens sana in corpore sano. A famous Latin phrase, which for many is a fundamental rule of life. And if it is for us why it should not also for our 4-legged friends. In this book you will find a number of exercises for your faithful friend who will hold his mind and his body fit. Small and simple games that do well in addition to create a strong bond that dog and owner as well as in some respects and helps education of your puppy. Remains a fundamental rule ... as for children even with dogs it takes patience. Everyone must learn no one is born teacher

I love our pups and my kids always have a great time playing with them. I decide to train them so that theyâ™ll develop a more stable behavior once they grow up. As per this book by Carrier Nicole, I find it very helpful and straightforward. Itâ™s very enlightening to know that there are tricks (that I donâ™t know of that I could teach my pups! My kids love watching the pups do some tricks and I think itâ™s also a nice bonding time for us too!
