Customer Reviews

Fair warning, this is going to be the longest and most personal product review I have ever written. It is certainly the most emotional and least objective I have ever been while reading a book for review. This book took my heart right where it is in the here and now and convicted my soul in exactly the ways that I needed. If at least one person doesn't click over and buy this book for themselves or someone they know I have failed in my review. Grieving the Child I Never Knew is a devotional written by Kathe Wunnenberg that covers the full spectrum of pregnancy and infant loss. The hardcover volume is the perfect size and quality for repeated reading and gift giving. Included in the devotional: 31 Readings (organized by topics: more on that later) Scripture, prayers, and personal reflection questions for each reading Extensive indexing of devotionals (suggestions for specific days, scripture indexes) Tips for sharing your own story Discussion questions for small groups Additional prayers and scriptures for various events surrounding pregnancy and infant loss (I plan to keep this list close for future for card writing) 8 suggested ways for using the title Full contact information for the author on twitter, Facebook (author and organization), and website. Now that I've covered the nuts and bolts promotional stuff, let's get real. I knew almost from the moment that I received this title that it was going to be hard to read at times. I put it next to the chair I most often nurse Tomas in and pulled it out regularly over the course of the last few weeks, sometimes reading through several devotionals at once and sometimes sticking with just one.
