As we age, fitness gets a little more difficult than it was when we were younger, but that doesn't have to stop us! No matter our age, we deserve to live full, fit, healthy, and vibrant lives and exercise is one major key to having that full life we deserve. There are many fitness programs out there, but they all seem to be for young people who are already in perfect shape. What's going on? In many parts of the world, people over the age of 50 seem to be increasingly ignored and forgotten and that's a real shame. No matter the age, we deserve to be healthy, fit, vibrant, and full of life and this book can help anyone of any age get there with ease. The truth is, if you are over the age of 50 and out of shape (or would like to be in better shape than you are right now), it's not your fault that you are where you are - there really aren't many exercise resources for you to choose from. ## Customer Reviews

I bought this for my parents since they seem to have been getting more interested in taking care of themselves lately. They're starting to eat healthier, so I thought maybe they'd like to start exercising as well. They read the book over the weekend and have been putting it to use already with good results. I skimmed it a bit before putting it on my mom's kindle and actually ended up getting pretty interested in rebounding after reading the long list of health benefits. The exercises are simple and safe and seem to be well-chosen for the subject. I also thought the section on building a simple straightforward exercise plan was helpful.

Gives clear and precise information to put together the perfect work out for anyone. You don't have to be a senior to benefit from Ken Strong's instructions.

This is an excellent book for the senior looking to begin an exercise program. It recommends exercises and explains in detail the benefits of each.

Thank you for this easily understood book which explains the benefits and steps to take for those in need of a slower approach to better health . It is perfect for what I need.

Very good for seniors
